Over the course of more than 50 albums and in performances around the globe, Richard Stoltzman has proven that he has few peers on the clarinet. At least, few living peers. Stoltzman salutes the “King of Swing,” Benny Goodman, in a performance that will make it clear, as the San Francisco Chronicle has argued, that he “is a national treasure and should be so declared.”

The University of Iowa’s own Johnson County Landmark, a jazz band to be reckoned with, will join Stoltzman on stage. It will be a night of serious swinging as one clarinet master honors another while treating the audience to some of the most popular music ever made.

The open rehearsal is an exclusive opportunity for you to observe clarinetist Richard Stoltzman and the UI School of Music’s own Johnson County Landmark rehearse the program, Salute to Benny Goodman, before the public performance on Saturday. A brief question and answer period will follow the rehearsal.
